Another Arrest.

Chief Mundy captured a Port Allegany chap named Coughlin, charged with stealing a watch. There is quite a joke connected with this case. Building Falls on Woman Fatally Injuring Her.

Last Sunday morning, while assisting her husband, Allen Russell, who resides on Four Mile, to move an outbuilding, which he had placed on a stone boat, the building falling on her, fatally injuring, her back. Dr. H. S. Falk was called and reported the lady's back broken. The sad circumstances surrounding the family is deeply deplored, seven children being afflicted. The husband, Allen Russell, who works in the woods most of the time, is certainly to be sympathized with.

The injured lady was moved to the residence of Mrs. Allen, Sr., on the Portage, near Emporium, on Tuesday that she might be nearer to the attending physician, or sent to a hospital. We deeply feel for the afflicted family.

LATER—Dr. H. S. Falk took the injured lady to the Williamsport hospital Tuesday evening.

Physician's Maladies.

A French newspaper publishes some statistics showing the causes of death in the medical profession. The figures are impressive, but there is no indication as to the source of the information. We read that 44 per cent. die of heart disease, 20 per cent. from nervous affections, 20 per cent. from the morphia habit, and 7 per cent. from tuberculosis. The prevalence of morphia is ascribed to the fact that a doctor knows when his malady is incurable, and morphia is sought to soothe the mind.

For Cleaning Ivory Ornaments.

To clean ivory ornaments, first brush them well with a soft luke-warm water and a little soap; then rinse them in water of the same temperature, dry with a cloth and a brush till the luster reappears. Pour a little alcohol upon the brush, and should the ivory have become yellow, drying it in a gentle heat is recommended. I have tried this process many times, and have always had the greatest success. —Woman's Home Companion.

On the Track.

A Burlington passenger train coming into St. Joseph had to stop and remove a sleeping man from the track. A brakeman was left to hold the man and when the train reached the station a policeman was sent to arrest the track sleeper. He was running down the right of way with the brakeman hanging to his coattails with all brakes set.—Kansas City Star.

Horned Snake in South Carolina.

James M. Henderson killed a horned snake at his home, near Bush river, on the Belfast road, on Tuesday. It was about two feet long and lying on a stump in the field. At the end of its tail was a horn, something like a rooster's spur.—Newberry Observer.

CHASING RAINBOWS.

WILL ADORN BENCH

HUGHES EMINENTLY FITTED FOR THE SUPREME COURT.

At the Same Time It Will Be Regretted That a Man of His Attainments and Probity Is Removed From Politics.

It is a great, surpassingly great, tribute to any American to say that his appointment to a place upon the bench of the highest judicial tribunal in the world strikes his countrymen as in some sense—or degree—a waste of precious stuff, something less than the fullest and most vital utilizing of a great force for civic righteousness and national well being. In view of the enormous power and influence of the Supreme court it might well be argued that no man could ask a loftier sphere of labor than it gives, and yet Charles Evans Hughes will pass out of the more active, more political, phases of public life into the quiet and dignity of his new sphere of service, leaving his countrymen in doubt whether he ought to be spared, even for so exalted a station.

Governor Hughes will take to the bench of the court which has always impressed European students of American affairs as being the strongest feature of the federal government of the United States, the fullest and highest confidence of his fellow-citizens. The country will rejoice to know that so just and strong and fearless a man, so rare a combination of the clear brain and the unbending conscience, is to sit in judgment on legal questions which reach, time and again, to the very heart and soul of American national life. There will be general and deep satisfaction with Charles E. Hughes as a justice of the Supreme court, but it will not prevent much regret that he can no longer be reckoned with as a great force in the active hurly-burly of public life.

For the governor of New York is an almost priceless leader on the side of righteousness. He can ill be spared from the battlefields of national politics. There ought to be two of him—one for the court where he has chosen his sphere of service, the other for the hard fighting of politics and the strenuous affairs of state. But of the wisdom of President Taft's selection there can be no question. He could find no better man for the Supreme court.

Keynote of Republicanism.

The new ideals of civic and governmental responsibility which were given form and impetus by Theodore Roosevelt have become the keynote of the new Republicansm and are today the crux of the issue between the ancient and passing order and the exponents of the new.

This adjustment of the party to the demands of the living present is the surest proof of its vitality and the soundness of its underlying principles and its ability to accomplish its own reformation is the surest proof of its fitness to accomplish the political, administrative and economic reforms which the country demands.

The Democrats are talking loudly about their "opportunity;" but they can be relied upon to do the traditionally wrong thing.—Buffalo Commercial.

Fair fighting for opinion need not cause either side to read the other out of the party. What the president wants is harmony on Republican pledges and a united front against the common foe in the congressional campaign.—Washington Post.

Governor Marshall, in other words, is opposing Beveridge for re-election because he expects him to be in the Democratic party two years hence. Is that it? There have been more convincing arguments.

KNOX'S IDEAS TO TRIUMPH?

Today There Seems to Be Strong Probability of the Establishment of International Court.

Washington dispatches represent Secretary Knox as most hopeful of the outcome of his proposal for the establishment of a permanent international court of arbitral justice. Reports regarding the attitude of the powers are understood to be most encouraging, so much so as to justify the expectation that before the next peace conference at The Hague in 1915 the arbitral court will be an accomplished fact.

The secretary cites an apt illustration of the present state of international society when he compares it to the conditions that existed in California after the discovery of gold. Then in the absence of courts every man carried a pistol with which to seek redress for his real or fancied wrongs. That is precisely the condition among the powers today, the great war establishments representing the pistols of the forty-niners. This chaotic and anarchistic system of individualism on the Pacific slope led to the creation of self-constituted committees who enforced the elementary rules of social life in the mining camps until ultimately they came to have the force of law. The proposed arbitral court will, it is expected, create a system of international law by judicial decision in the same way until the world has a code for international as well as individual relationship.

Mr. Knox believes that this court will be the first step toward the removal of the burden of militarism. With the substitution of law for force, of justice for war, there will be a decreasing need for armament until ultimately it becomes as obsolete as the pistols of the forty-niners in the higher civilization of the California of today.

NO REAL REASON TO WORRY

Democratic Success, in the Highest Degree Improbable, Will Not Disturb Business.

Business men and investors who fear the disturbing effect of a new tariff, as the result of Democratic success in coming elections, should realize that no general change in the tariff is possible within the next two years, at least.

The house of representatives which is to be chosen next fall will not begin its legal existence as a working body until December, 1911, unless convened in special session by the president. Certainly it will never be so set in motion sooner than the regular date by Mr. Taft, if it should prove to be a free trade or low tariff body.

If the house should be Democratic and of free trade proclivities it could not hope to pass a tariff bill before late winter or spring, after the session began—say in February or March, 1912. And then the senate and the president would have to be reckoned with

The way to a new tariff making radical and general changes appears to be very thoroughly blocked until the spring of 1913, three years from now, at the earliest. It is borrowing trouble without excuse to worry about the effect of possible Democratic victories, in the near future, upon the tariff system of the United States.

Administrations change and issues change. It is narrow for any former official to assume that his way of doing things was the only way and that any successor who departs from it is in the wrong. If Colonel Roosevelt has anything to say, it will, in all likelihood, be an approval of the conduct of the Taft administration.—Tacoma Ledger.

It will be hard for some of the critics of legislation to get over the habit of holding Mr. Aldrich of Rhode Island responsible for everything that displeases them.

HAD BEEN TO THE SERVICE

Impression on Childish Mind Was What Mother at First Failed to Understand.

Robert Saltsman, a prominent citizen of Erie, Pa., was in town the other day long enough to relate the strange church-going experience of his son Chester. The boy had been in the habit of going to church with his mother, but one Sunday she was unable to go, and he persuaded her to let him go by himself. Well, when he returned from the seat of Gospel dispensation his mother was anxious to ascertain how closely he had paid attention. She asked him what had been the text for the sermon.

"Don't worry, you'll get the quilt," replied the boy promptly.

The father failed to see the connection. Once more she inquired about the text, and the boy repeated his remark: "Don't worry, you'll get the quilt."

This about convinced the mother that her son was getting a bit too fresh for so small a child, and she made up her mind to punish him. Just then she saw a friend going home from church, and she called after her to learn what the text had been.

Here was what it was: "Have no fear, the Comforter will be with you."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Whole Country Is Stirred.

One of the most interesting reports at the recent meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis was that of the executive secretary, Dr. Livingston Farrand, showing the growth of the anti-tuberculosis movement since May 1, 1909. The number of associations for the prevention of consumption has increased from 290 to over 425; the number of sanatoria and hospitals for the treatment of tuberculosis is from 298 to 400; and the special tuberculosis dispensaries from 222 to 265. During the year 1909, thirty-six out of forty-three legislatures in session considered the subject of tuberculosis, and in 28, bills were passed for the prevention or treatment of this disease. Since the opening of the legislative season of 1910, out of ten legislatures in session up to May 1, all have considered the subject of tuberculosis and every one of them has enacted some law that bears on this subject.

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted — where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising see to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

MAKE YOUR APPEAL

to the public through the columns of this paper. With every issue it carries its message into the homes and lives of the people. Your competitor has his store news in this issue. Why don't you have yours? Don't blame the people for flocking to his store. They know what he has.

The Home Paper Gives you the reading matter in which you have the greatest interest—the home news. Its every issue will prove a welcome visitor to every member of the family. It should head your list of newspaper and periodical subscriptions.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in haphazard fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

JOB PRINTING We can do the finest class of printing, and we can do that class just a little cheaper than the other fellow. Wedding invitations, letter heads, bill heads, sale bills, statements, dodgers, cards, etc., all receive the same careful treatment—just a little better than seems necessary. Prompt delivery always.

WHO'S WHO-AND WHY

HERRICK DEPLORES WASTE

Myron T. Herrick, former governor of Ohio, Cleveland banker, railroad director and possessor of enough of this world's goods to keep the wolf away from most any old door, has been mentioned again recently as a possible member of President Taft's cabinet.

The sun hardly rises and sets in Washington without some rumor that a cabinet officer intends to resign and the latest of these involves Franklin Mac Veagh of Chicago, secretary of the treasury. Mr. Mac Veagh said it was news to him, but, despite his statement, some of the wiseacres proceeded to pick his successor and Herrick headed the list. Nobody doubts that Mr. Herrick would make a good secretary of the treasury. He knows the financial game from A to izzard and recently in a speech in New York showed that he has some ideas concerning how Uncle Sam's money matters should be handled.

Uncle Sam is extravagant and wastes his money, according to Mr. Herrick, who explained by way of preface that in the early history of the United States, where there were foreign complications, men of ability preferred government service because of the prominence it gave them. Later, when these foreign complications had disappeared and the country was once fairly started, this class of men preferred to devote their energies to commercial and industrial enterprises, which may be taken to mean that the former governor doesn't want a cabinet job at all.

"Many of those who have assumed the administrative functions of government," he said, "are so poorly qualified that the consequent waste and extravagance are appalling. The evidence is conclusive that in the national government itself there is a vast and growing amount of extravagance in administration.

"Senator Aldrich gives it as his opinion that the national government could save $300,000,000 a year if it were conducted on a business basis and managed as cleverly and efficiently as a large corporation. This amount is 40 per cent. of the whole cost of running the government and it is $33,000,000 more than all the dividends paid to all the stockholders of all the railroads in the United States.

"To the high cost of operating the national government may be attributed the duties on many articles that otherwise should be admitted at a lower rate or put on the free list. It is not the tariff that is responsible for the high cost of living, but it is cumbersome public business methods, public extravagance and waste, which are largely responsible for the high tariff.

HUGHES FOR SUPREME COURT

Charles Evans Hughes, governor of New York, who in October will leave the executive chair at Albany to don the robes of the Supreme court of the United States, has been in the limelight ever since he conducted the probe that revealed the big scandals in the insurance world.

After he defeated William Randolph Hearst for governor, Mr. Hughes naturally got into line for the presidency, as a New York governor always is regarded as a possibility. Theodore Roosevelt, however, wanted his friend Taft to be president and the result is history. But Governor Hughes kept on doing things, as the race track gamblers, among others, can testify, and in 1912 it is more than probable that the name of Hughes would again be heard in connection with the presidency had not President Taft appointed him to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Brewer. Governor Hughes recently announced that he intended to retire from politics and devote his attention to making money for his family. As governor he receives $10,000 a year and as a justice of the Supreme court he will get $12,000. He could earn much more practising law. On this account he hesitated about accepting the honor offered him by the president, but after being urged by Senator Root and other party leaders he took it.

Governor Hughes was born in Glens Falls, N. Y., April 11, 1862. His father was David Chase Hughes and his mother was Mary Catherine Connelly. He was graduated from Brown university with the degree of A. B. in 1881. He received his degree of LL. B. from Columbia Law school in 1884. He was married December 5, 1888, to Antoinette Carter.

Mr. Hughes was admitted to the New York bar in 1884, and received a prize fellowship from Columbia Law school in the same year. He practised law in New York city until 1891, when he assumed the chair of professor of law in Cornell university. He became notable through the life insurance investigation. He was elected governor in 1896 and re-elected in 1908.

POLICE CHIEF FOR LIFE

The board of police commissioners in St. Louis has chosen a chief for life. Col. William Young is the man who heads the police department of the fourth largest city in the United States.

Most everybody in St. Louis who knows Colonel Young at all calls him "Billy." He has been on the St. Louis police force 32 years, starting as a patrolman and working himself up round by round until he now enjoys a salary of $5,000 a year, an automobile and other accessories that go with such a job.

When Col. Edmond P. Creecy got into the mixup over the shortage in the police relief association's accounts, although he was in no wise guilty of any connection with the alleged embezzlements, Governor Hadley, who appoints the police board, decided that a change in chiefs was necessary.

Chief Young showed his common sense the day after his appointment when he announced that the police would not molest the Chinese of St. Louis for playing fan tan. He said a Chinaman had as much right to play fan tan as a German has to play pinochle. Then the new chief said he would permit boxing before regularly organized clubs. "Billy" Young is worth $100,000, according to reports, but his wealth has never interfered with his duties as a policeman. Many a poor family down in the old Soulard street district, where Young was captain for several years, knows how some of his wealth has gone to relieve suffering. Colonel Young was at the head of the regular police force on the world's fair grounds and his work in that respect helped a lot when the board investigated his record.

NEWEST DEMOCRATIC HERO

"Great Scott! Why, if this thing keeps up, even John Dalzell and Gen. Harry Bingham ain't safe."

It was a Republican member of congress talking the day after James S. Havens, Democrat, was elected representative of the thirty-second district of New York. Following so soon after the election of Foss in one of Massachusetts' Republican strongholds, the election of Mr. Havens, who was not known outside of his own state, naturally created more than a ripple in the Republican ranks.

Mr. Havens, who made the high cost of living his battle cry, just as a lot of other Democratic candidates are going to do in the campaign that is to come this fall, sums up his election like this:

"This is not wholly a partisan victory. It is a victory over the things for which Cannon has stood and for the ideals which Governor Hughes typifies."

Mr. Havens is a lawyer and a former partner of the late Representative James Breck Perkins, whom he succeeds. He was born in Weedsport, Cayuga county, in 1859. He was graduated from Yale in 1884.

He went to Rochester immediately after graduating, was admitted to the bar in 1886, and has practised law ever since. Although active in Democratic politics, he has never before held public office. He is regarded as a typical Democrat of the old school.

PREVENTING DISEASE IN CATTLE REQUIRES LABOR

However, It Is Both Humane and Profitable—Two Great Scourges in Calf Bearing Are White Scours and Lung Affection.

(By W. R. KILBERT.)

The two great scourges in calf rearing are the white scours and the lung affection, which latter has been proved to be quite preventable. The method requires extreme but not laborious care in carrying out. When this care is taken satisfactory results are obtained.

Investigation has proved, first, that the disease is located in districts; and, second, that it is more prevalent where sanitary conditions are not perfect; third, that the disease is contracted through allowing the infectious matter of the place when the calf is dropped to come into contact with the navel of the young calf, through which it finds its way into the circulation of the animal.

The remedy is to have the place for the young calf carefully cleansed and as soon as the calf comes into the world to dress the navel with a preparation of carbolic acid that will destroy any infectious matter that may attach itself to the navel.

Naturally failures have been reported even when precautions have been taken and doubts cast on the theory of infection.

Still, seeing that infection of diseases similar to this may be carried on the point of a fine needle, how can we say with confidence that the disease white scours occurs through any other cause than infection in places where the infective matter has been known almost with certainty to exist?

There are districts where this scourge is unknown. Let a diseased calf be brought in and the disease at once appears.

All houses in which young calves are reared should be made thoroughly clean; a large application of disinfectants should be made until the place is made free, and all calves should be liberally supplied with clean, dry straw for bedding.

Another disease appears to be a form of contagious bronchitis. It is generally fatal if it is allowed to run unchecked for some time.

It is possible that this very serious disease may be caused by allowing calves to remain out in the fields too long in cold, wet weather.

Provide good, comfortable, dry quarters for calves while they are young. Let them have sufficient ventilation in their houses without drafts. Allow them open air exercise only on warm days, and not until they are sufficiently strong to withstand even moderately cold weather. Never allow a young calf to have its coat saturated with cold rain water.

The principal matter to be borne in mind is that all young animals taken from their natural conditions of life and living must have thoughtful care, and it should not be necessary to observe that in the management of calves we are dealing with a valuable farm asset that will repay considerable care.

Contentment in Hot Weather.

GROUND PLAN OF BULL PEN

We herewith illustrate the elevation and ground plan of the building and yard in which we keep our herd bull, says Hoard's Dairyman. It does not take much explaining to indicate how the animal is handled in such a place.

Everything is so arranged that it is not necessary for a man to go into the stall with the bull. From the feed room the feed is put into the feeding trough and slid through the partition into his stall. He is watered in the same manner. The door which leads from his pen to the runway raises up when opened and this is done by a pulley and a rope. The pulley is attached to the peak of the barn above the doorway and the rope attached to the door extends to it and to the feed room where the door may be opened or closed. The door between the breeding pen and the runway is always kept closed, except when it is opened to let the bull into this place.

The cow is led in the breeding pen before the bull is permitted to enter and then the man steps out as soon as he opens the door which permits the bull to come where the cow is.

PIGEONS PAY PRETTY WELL

Great Secret of Success Is to Get Good Birds and Only Those That Are Mated—Always in Demand.

Boys often raise a few pigeons just for the fun of the thing, but they can make money in the business as well.

It does not pay to do anything half way, and it does not take any more time to properly care for 100 pigeons than for a dozen.

If a boy starts with pure-bred homer stock, he can make a profit of at least two dollars per pair every year.

The great secret is to get good birds, and only those that are mated. If a lot of unmated birds are put in a loft together there will be a deal of fighting, squabbling and egg breaking, and it may turn out that there are more males than females, or the other way.

Never buy birds unless the dealer will guarantee mates.

There is always a good demand for squabs, just as there is for poultry, and the market is not overdone. Game is becoming scarcer every year and squabs are taking its place.

It costs about one dollar a year to feed a pair of pigeons, and high-class birds ought to average six pairs of squabs every year. These should sell for $3 to $3.50, leaving a very decent margin.

There is a great deal to learn about squab-raising, and a boy should write to several dealers to get all the information he can.

Then he should write to some man who is raising squabs for market, who will probably discourage him.

This will take some of the enthusiasm out of him, but will serve a good purpose.

Finding of Fresh-Water Eel.

The straits of Messina are channels of immense depth, through which a wild form of whirling eddies have the effect of bringing up from the depths below many marine creatures which are rarely seen except in the deep sea trawls. It was here that the fresh-water eel was first discovered, an incident which threw a blaze of light on the life history of a very mysterious fish.—London Daily Telegraph.

When Company Comes.

If there's one thing above all others that makes a woman feel desperate it is to have company drop in unexpectedly to spend the day, and to know that her table-cloth is yellow from the last washing and the napkins worn in holes and dingy looking. If she had used Easy Task laundry soap her table linen would have been spotlessly white and she would be proud of it. Easy Task soap is the enemy of dirt and the friend of fabrics of all kinds. Try it next Monday and you'll rename washday to Easy Task day.

Didn't Care to Mention His Name.

A colored woman presented herself the other day in an equal suffrage state at the place of registration to qualify for the casting of her vote on the school question at the next election.

"With what political party do you affiliate?" inquired the clerk of the unaccustomed applicant, using the prescribed formula.

The dusky "lady" blushed, all coyness and confusion. "Is I 'bleged to answer that there question?"

"Certainly; the law requires it."

"Then," retreating in dismay, "I don't believe I'll vote, 'case I'd hate to have to mention the party's name. He's one of the nicest gent-mums in town."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Light on Cause of Tuberculosis.

The sixth annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis was held in Washington on May 2 and 3. Among the most interesting papers was one by Dr. William H. Park, the famous pathologist and head of the laboratories of the New York City department of health. Dr. Park contended that pulmonary tuberculosis is very rarely, if ever, caused by infection from bovine sources, such as the drinking of milk or the eating of meat. Tuberculosis of the stomach and internal organs, which compose only about ten per cent. of the sickness from this disease, are often caused by drinking or eating infected matter. Doctor Park substantiated his conclusions by showing the results of years of investigation and examination of pathological specimens. His conclusions are substantially those reached by Dr. Robert Koch, the discoverer of the tubercle bacillus.

Delayed Attention Costs Money.

Your house wears out if not painted. It costs more to repair it than it costs to paint it. It don't cost much to paint with the L. & M. Paint, because 4 gallons of L. & M. Paint and 3 gallons of Linseed Oil makes seven gallons of ready-for-use paint at a cost of about $1.30 per gallon. You can mix yourself. Thirty-five years use in every part of the United States proves it. Atlantic City & Pittsburgh Fence Tests, made by the Master painters Association, prove it. Sold by Harry S. Lloyd, Emporium, Pa.

False Report Righted.

A false report has been circulated calculated to injure a hard-working and industrious citizen—Mr. John Kackenmeister—for many years employed as baker in the City Bakery. The report having again been revived and calculated to injure the business recently purchased by Mr. Richard Kelly. Mr. Kackenmeister called upon Drs. R. P. Heilman and S. S. Smith, who issued the following certificate on May 21st, 1910.

To Whom Concerned:

This certifies that we have carefully examined Mr. John Kackenmeister and fail to find any evidence of tuberculosis, or commonly called comsumption.

Rev. Robertson Resigns.

him at the Parish House, Wednesday evening, June 1st between the hours of eight and ten."

The resignation, coming as it did was a surprise to the community, is universally regretted. During the fourteen years that this excellent gentleman has been associated with our townspeople, Rev. Robertson has to a very marked degree aided in the up-building of every laudable project. His services were always cheerfully given and his pen readily flowed for the advancement of every cause he thought to be right, without fear or favor. Personally THE PRESS shall always remember his many courtesies and unselfish, kind words of cheer and comfort. Emporium is losing the most talented clergyman and polished gentleman within its confine and his place will be one hard to fill.

Rev. Mr. Robertson will go to Monticelli, N. Y., where his family are now located, to take a long needed rest, where we hope he may happily enjoy the delightful resort, among his relatives and friends.

The following, copied from the Elmira, N. Y., Star-Gazette of Feb. 22, 1910, can at this time be be copied very appropriately:

"This handsome edifice at Emporium is now under the rectorship of the Rev. James Marion Robertson, who was born near Thorald, Ont., in 1866. His grandfather came from Scotland in 1830, and his father was the Rev. John L. Robertson, a Presbyterian divine. An uncle, the late Dr. Hugh Robertson, was a professor of anatomy in Trinity Medical School, Toronto. Another uncle, Mr. Emerson Coatsworth, has twice served as mayor of Toronto. Mr. Robertson was graduated from Westminister College (Pa.) in 1895, A. B., with highest honors. He was principal for one year of an academy in Lancaster county and spent a year at the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Allegany, Pa.

In 1892 he was graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary. He was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at White Lake, Sullivan county N. Y., from 1892 to 1894. He became a candidate for orders in the diocese of New York, and was ordained to the deconate by the late Bishop Henry C. Potter in December, 1894. He was in mission work in the diocese of Pittsburg, and was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Whitehead in December, 1895. He was called to the rectorship of Emmanuel Church, Emporium, Pa., in 1896, where he has since labored with gratifying success. The present beautiful church building was erected in 1901-3 of Medina sandstone at a cost of $21,000. Four years ago a new pipe organ costing $3,000, was installed. It is expected soon to add new furnishings in the chancel. The old church building has changed to a Snnday school room and parish house. There are now about 140 confirmed persons in membership, and through his efforts the church has grown to be potent for great good. The last confirmation class numbered 27, the largest in the history of the parish. The Hon. B. W. Green, lately president judge of the 25th judicial district, and the Hon. Josiah Howard are the wardens of the parish. The Rev. Mr. Robertson is a pastor of strong intellectuality. He has read deeply in ancient and modern philosophy, and stands on the solid ground of substantial faith, rather than that of blind belief. With him Christian revelation is not an arbitary theological scheme, but the natural outcome of a harmonious system uniting the natutal man with the spiritual energizing nature of the Divine Father. He has been a leader in the liberal movement in the church, and has written considerably on religious questions, one of his papers being entitled, 'The Incarnation of God.' He is a broad-minded scholar and a devout Christian and a faithful pastor. He is one of the examining chaplains of the Archdeaconry of Erie, and is the county superintendent under the State Sunday School Association. He is also chaplain of Companies L and M of the Fifth Pennsylvania Regiment of the United Boys' Brigades of America. He was married in 1892 to Miss Evalena Porter of New Wilmington, Pa., who died three month after their marriage. In 1895 he married Miss Annie Van Antwerp of Monticello, N. Y., the representative of and old Dutch family. He has four daughters."

"If You Find a Jew Here, I Will Agree to Eat Him."

"I Shall Be Most Happy," Said Hardy.

SYNOPSIS.

Frederick Hardy, a fashionable Boston society man, lost his wealth, was jilted by a girl and sent by a friend to take charge of an American Trading Company store in Russia. On his journey through Japan he met Stapleton Neville, supposedly an Englishman. They agreed to go together to Russia. Because of suspicious circumstances they were several times molested by the Japanese. Hardy was arrested and found upon his person were papers showing maps of Jap forts. Hardy was proven guiltless. On a train he met Aisome Sano, daughter of a Jap merchant. In Neville's shoes Jap found pictures of forts, proving him to be a Russian spy. Hardy departed for Russia on a steamer, which was wrecked shortly afterward. He was rescued by a Russian steamer. On reaching Vladivostok he was well treated. He started for Siberia, meeting Princess Romanovna on the train. Hardy boarded a vessel for Amur. Hardy showed the princess his expertness as a rifle shot. The steamer was stranded. The princess and her maid were attacked by Chinese. Hardy saved their lives. The princess thanked Hardy for his heroism. Manchurians fired upon the craft. Hardy slew their chief. Burning arrows were hurled upon the Pushkin's decks. An attempt was made to board the vessel. The attacking Chinese were repulsed. Romanoff sneered at Hardy's solicitude for the princess. Stanka, a messenger sent for help, was nailed to a cross on the shore. To put an end to the awful torture Hardy himself put Stanka out of his misery, taking his own life in his hands. Forest fires menaced the vessel. Hardy volunteered to go for help. Refused permission he jumped overboard and started to swim with the princess' distress message. Romanoff was angry at Hardy for his brave efforts to rescue the princess. He wooed her in his own savage way. He said Hardy had made love openly to a Japanese girl. Help came and the princess was rescued. Hardy journeyed on a raft. Arriving at his destination he took charge of the trading company's business. Hardy received a letter from a social leader in Boston and another from Aisome. Hardy took lessons in Russian of a Jew, thus connecting himself in a way with that race. Hardy received a letter from the princess, thanking him for his bravery. Hardy's teacher was in danger of death.

A corpulent man with white side whiskers sat in it. He wore an American fall overcoat, of the latest cut and a derby hat.

"What's the matter here, friends?" he asked, standing up in the carriage. He spoke perfect, fluent Russian. There was no fear in his face, his voice, or his attitude. A sudden hush fell on the throng.

"If you please, Mr. Emery," said the tall Russian, who had acted as ringleader, "we want the Jew who is being sheltered in the store. Another Christian child has been sacrificed, and we are punishing the Jews. We want Mordecai, and if this man in the window is a Jew, we want him, too."

"He a Jew?" laughed Emery. "He is as good a Christian as any man amongst you. Do you think that I would have sent a Jew here to take charge of my store? Do you not know me better than that?"

"We thought so because he associated with a Jew constantly, in preference to Christians," said the ringleader.

"How is that, Mr. Hardy?" asked Emery, "what explanation have you to make to these good people?"

"I hired the Jew to teach me Russian," said Hardy. "He was the only man in town who spoke English sufficiently well."

"Ah, do you see? Do you see?" cried old Emery, unctuously, waving a conciliatory arm in the air. "He made use of the Jew that he might learn the beautiful language of Holy Russia and thus become able to converse with you, his friends and neighbors, my friends and neighbors. I see it all!" Here Mr. Emery opened both palms and extended them over the crowd. "He, no doubt, kept the Jew constantly with him, that he might learn the language as soon as possible and thus get rid of him at the earliest moment compatible with his laudable purpose. You see what astounding progress he has made. I could hardly believe my ears when I heard my friend speaking Russian so well. Mr. Hardy, is there a Jew concealed in the store?"

"Nyet," replied Hardy.

"He says 'No,' and that convinces me. Nevertheless, you shall come in and see for yourselves, and if you find a Jew here, I will agree to eat him, without pepper or salt. Mr. Hardy, come down and open the door."

Hardy complied with the request, and Emery jumping briskly from the carriage, entered, calling out cheerfully:

"Vladimar, Anatoli, Sergei, come in and look about, and then you shall take out a barrel of vodka and all the friends shall drink to my safe return to Holy Russia."

The three men entered shamefacedly, protesting that they would take Mr. Emery's word as to the Jew, but he slapped them one by one heartily on the back, shouting:

"Come in, brothers, come in!"

Twenty minutes later they went out with a barrel of vodka, announcing:

"Christians, there is no Jew here. Let us drink to the health of Frederick Emery!"

The mob dispersed.

"Well!" exclaimed old Emery, as he slammed down the iron shutter, "what in the devil does all this mean?"

"It means," explained Hardy, "that there has been a massacre of Jews, and that Mordecai, whom I employed to teach me Russian, fled here for shelter. Wang, here, my Korean errand boy, and I disguised him as a priest and sent him about his business."

"Good!" exclaimed Emery, "good! Blamed clever!" He sprang to his feet and paced the store. He was an excitable man. "But I got here just in time. I came up on the Ingoda. Those blood-thirsty devils might have set fire to the store and perhaps have killed you. I think I'll stay here for a month or so, and help you out. My boy, I have great news. Good news! Glorious news!" Here he jumped upon the counter, and, sitting there, looked triumphantly at Hardy, pulling fiercely meanwhile at his side whiskers.

"What is it?" asked Hardy.

"War, my boy; war between Russia and Japan!"

"And do you call that good news?"

"Yes, for merchants, for commerce, I fear you haven't acquired the commercial spirit yet, my boy. Big contracts, tremendous sales, high prices. An unparalleled demand for everything on earth. Business! business! business, till you can't rest—that's what war means! We'll have tremendous shipments of goods sent over to Vladivostok, and every steamer that comes up the river bringing them to our stores. It'll be a big war, a great big war, for little Japan is going to give Russia the fight of her life!"

"Do you think so?" asked Hardy, wonderingly. "Do you think Japan will be able to stand up against Russia?"

"Stand up against her!" shouted Emery. "Why, she'll make her tremble to the very foundations. My friends out there will have something beside Jew-baiting to attend to when that war breaks out. I've been in Japan, looking the ground over, and I know what I'm talking about. Did you ever see a mother cat pounce on a big clumsy dog? Well, Japan is a whole nation of wildcats, 30,000,000 wildcats, and Russia is the clumsiest kind of a clumsy dog."

"By the way," said Hardy, "I wonder what became of Mordecai's mother? I forgot all about her in the excitement."

"The Christians killed her," said Wang, who was standing in the shadow.

"Hello!" exclaimed Emery, "that boy of yours speaks Russian. And blamed well, too!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

Hardy Hesitates.

Emery stayed on in Stryetensk, lengthening his visit into months, and Hardy became greatly attached to him, finding the companionship of this cheerful, bold, resourceful, self-made man an inspiration which the fellowship of his former society friends had never afforded him. The old merchant received frequent advices from his agent in Japan which confirmed him in the belief that war was imminent, and Stryetensk, at the head of river navigation in Siberia, seemed to him the most important of the company's posts in Russia.

Vasili, who was suspected of having been active in exciting popular hatred against Hardy, whom he regarded as having supplanted him, was transferred to Blagovestchensk. And during all this time the Korean boy, whose intelligence and adaptability were truly marvelous, steadily grew in favor with his employers. His progress in Russian was phenomenal, and as it transpired that he also knew Japanese and some Chinese, he was, after a couple of months, promoted from errand boy to the office, and set to writing letters.

In the meanwhile Hardy received another letter from the Princess Romanovna, a chatty, delightful letter, in Russian this time, complimenting him on his progress in the language, and telling him much of her own life and of affairs in Moscow. Among other things, she mentioned the fact that she had spoken of his heroism on the Amur to the emperor and of the debt of gratitude that she owed him. She assured him that she would be glad to hear from him from time to time and signed her, "Your friend, Elizabetha Romanovna."

In January, Emery announced to Hardy one day that he wished the young man to take a trip to Moscow and perhaps to St. Petersburg on business.

"By the way," said Hardy, stammering slightly and feeling a trifle confused, "there is a—ah—matter of which I wish to speak to you. You know this country so much better than I, and its customs. I have received an invitation from the Princess Romanovna to call on her while in Moscow."

It was a little difficult to speak to Emery on this subject, he was so practical and his gray eyes were so shrewd, and at times twinkled so humorously. Yet he was thoroughly kind-hearted, he loved Hardy, both for his own and for his father's sake, and he took a paternal interest in the young man.

"Is she the one whom you saved from the Chinese brigands?"

"She is the—ah—the one whom I came up the Amur with," replied Hardy, modestly.

"Well, go and call on her!" decided Emery, without a moment's thought.

"Yes, but I feel some little hesitation. She is a princess, and I am now a merchant, and we are in Russia. I don't want her to feel under the least obligation to me for what I have done. That is to say, I do not want her to feel that I am taking advantage of it. She means all right, but taking me up might cause her some little inconvenience or embarrassment. Her relatives are proud and haughty, and I don't belong to her social set."

"Social set be blanked!" roared Emery. "Haven't you got that Boston tommy-rot out of your head yet? You're an American gentleman, and an American gentleman is good company for any princess that walks the surface of the globe. Besides, if you stay with me and this war goes right, I'll make a merchant prince out of you, my boy, and those are the only princes these days."

One week later, in the middle of January, Frederick Courtland Hardy crossed Lake Baikal to Irkutsk and there took the magnificent "train luxus," a nine-days' railway journey to Moscow. Though he was going on important business, yet he felt strangely agited over the fact that he was soon to see the princess again. With the agitation, too, was mingled a certain degree of misgiving and foreboding. He was not sure that his seeing her would conduce to his peace of mind.

He was accompanied by his secretary, Wang, the Korean boy, who had rendered himself indispensable through his genius for details.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Off to Moscow.

Hardy never forgot that journey to Moscow. For days the heavy train rolled slowly along through a vast park covered with illimitable stretches of snow, or through leafless, naked forests, shivering in the cold blasts of winter. All the trains that passed were crowded with emigrants, bound for the Amur region, and the car windows were thronged with the fresh, innocent faces of children. To many of the trains prison cars were attached, bearing their sorrowful freight to the dread island of Saghalin, which has taken the place of Siberia as a land for deportation. From the windows of these cars, also, many children looked out, pressing their little faces against the bars, for the condemned are allowed to take their families with them. Hardy had long since realized that he was in Russia, the Russia of the story-books and the magazine articles.

One evening a little before sunset they came in sight of Moscow—an indistinct blur of houses, out of which loomed large and clear the towers and domes of numerous churches, many of them overlaid with gold-leaf, and glittering gorgeously in the light of the setting sun.

At eight the train drew up in the modern and commodious station at Moscow, and the American, as he looked about him, felt that he was in the heart of European civilization once more.

Wang, who was invaluable through his ready wit and his knowledge of Russian, attended to the baggage and engaged a sledge to take his employer to the Slaviansky Bazar, or hotel, the best caravansary in the city, and a very sumptuous and comfortable inn, as it proved.

For several days he devoted his entire attention to business, conferring with merchants and going over lists, prices and accounts with Wang. Meanwhile, whenever he went into the streets, the interminable procession of sledges was there, and he watched them constantly, always with one face in his mind—that graceful head held so high, with its crown of hair the color of ripe wheat and fine as spider threads. Many ladies of pure Russian type he saw, their faces peeping saucily from collars and hoods of costly fur, and often he would start and his heart would throb more violently as he thought he recognized the princess. He would generally realize his mistake, however, before the sledge would dash by with its jingling bells.

He would have gone away without calling on her had he finished his business as quickly as the original plan contemplated, but old Emery, who had come up as far as Irkutsk, kept writing to him, sending new commissions. Emery, by the way, was becoming jubilant. The diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan were growing less cordial every day; the demands of the latter country were waxing more and more insistent and difficult to evade. The Japanese, too, according to Emery's advices, were rushing preparations for a death-grapple with the bear on a gigantic scale.

"This means war, my boy," wrote the old man, "and war means business!"

So Hardy worked away, enlarging his acquaintance with the Moscow merchants, while his respect for the magnitude of their operations and for the greatness of the city's industries steadily grew.

And one evening, as he walked home to his hotel, he saw the Princess Romanovna. There was no mistake about it this time, and he realized that, when it was indeed she, there could be no mistake. She was leaning back in a sledge with high curving dash, luxuriously piled with skins. On an elevated seat in front sat her coachman and footman, the former directing the energies of four milk-white steeds, whose tails were tied in knots, but whose long manes streamed wildly in the wind. Two of these horses were running free, and, thus untrammeled, the beauty and grace of their movements was a sight to be remembered for a lifetime. The princess wore a white round cap of fur, and her cheeks, deliciously reddened by the excitement and the keen teeth of the wind, were snuggled in the soft collar of a white fur cloak. Hardy noticed, with a thrill of distinct pleasure, that no man, but an older woman, accompanied her.

And the princess saw Hardy. As he arrested his steps at the edge of the curb and gravely lifted his hat, she bowed and, leaning forward, touched the coachman and called to him. The horses came to a sudden stop, rearing upon their haunches and plunging and slipping in a wild jumble. Presently they stopped and stood trembling. The sledge drew up to the curb.

"Why, Mr. Hardy!" exclaimed the princess in Russian, "I had no idea that you were in Moscow. How long have you been here?"

"A little over two weeks."

"Over two weeks and have not been to call on me! I do not consider that kind. Mme. Prebioff, this is Mr. Hardy, the American whom I told you about, who rescued me from the Chinese brigands, and performed such feats of valor on the Shilka. I do not see why he ever rescued me at all, if he does not think me worth calling on."

"The princess has talked constantly of you," said Mme. Prebioff; "half the young men in Moscow are waiting to challenge you. Hearing of your wonderful skill, they have all taken to practicing with the pistol. The proprietors of the galleries are getting rich, and one can scarcely sleep nights on account of the constant popping."

The princess laughed merrily. "You are positively incorrigible, Anna," she said. "But"—turning to Hardy—"tell me why you have not been to see me? What excuse have you to offer, sir?"

"I should have called before I left, to pay my respects," said Hardy, gravely. "I have been very busy. I am here on business, you know, for the American Trading Company, buying up stock for their posts on the Amur. I—ah, had not expected to devote much attention to society."

"Mr. Hardy is a merchant, then?" inquired Mme. Prebioff, languidly. "How very interesting!"

The princess' eyes flashed dangerously, but she made no reply to Mme. Prebioff.

"But even if you are busy," she said, "you can spare a little time for your friends. Will you not call on me to-morrow evening? I shall be quite alone, and we can talk over our wonderful adventures together. Come at eight."

The horses, stung by the cold, were becoming unmanageable now and were plunging and rearing.

"I shall be most happy," said Hardy.

"Au revoir, then," said the princess, "I shall expect you."

She spoke to the Isvoschik, and the sledge, with a sudden crash and a rhythmical jingle of bells, flew down the street. The American, with head uncovered, stood looking after it.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Hardy Engages a Cabman.

"How do I look, Wang?" Hardy asked of his Korean boy, who was sitting in the room of their suite at the hotel that did duty as an office. Wang glanced up from the pile of correspondence with which he was busy.

"You look like a gentleman," he replied, quietly.

"Thanks," said Hardy, who was in evening dress. "I am glad you think so, for the costume which I am now wearing was invented to convey the impression that a man is either a gentleman or a waiter, though it has, first and last, it must be confessed, covered the back of an occasional coward or clown. It is necessary for me to-night to look the gentleman, my boy," he added, whimsically, "for I am going to mingle with the haute noblesse. The merchant of Stryetensk, Wang, is on his way to the palace of the Romanoffs!"

Wang smiled. "Once a gentleman, always a gentleman," he replied. "There are many among the drunken, licentious and cowardly nobility of Russia who are less worthy to enter palaces than the merchant of Stryetensk!"

Hardy laid his hand on the other's shoulder.

"You look pale, by boy," he said, kindly. "You are working too hard. Put these away now and go to bed, or here—take this and go to the theater"—and he laid a gold piece on the table. Wang flushed and handed the money back.

"If I go to the theater," he said, with considerable spirit, "I can buy my own ticket."

Hardy's finer feelings prevented him from smiling.

"Pardon me, Wang," he said, restoring the money to his pocket. "I did not mean to offer you charity; merely a reward for exceptional attention to duty. But I must be going. The princess said eight and it's nearly that now. Don't work any more to-night."

He was gone.

"The princess!" muttered Wang, jabbing the pen, with which he had been writing, so spitefully into the table that he shattered its point. "The haughty, lemon-haired princess—and she wants nothing of him save to amuse herself! He has saved her life and now she will repay him by breaking his heart. I could kill her!"

Having given vent to this ebullition of seeming jealousy, Wang proceeded to illustrate still further the feminine nature of Korean boys, for he rested his head on his arms and sobbed for some moments violently. After which he twisted his neck about and kissed the spot upon his shoulder where his master's hand had rested.

"Because," said the iceman, "they're the only people on my route who aren't the four-chunks-a-week class."

"Probably that odor was an after thought."

Inside and Out.

Speaker Cannon at a dinner in Washington, said, soothingly, to a young suffragette:

"After all, you know, there is room for both men and women in this world. Men have their work to do and women have theirs.

"It is the woman's work to provide for the inner man, and it is the man's to provide for the outer woman."

Fool Remarks.

"The inanity of courtesy remarks that some people feel called upon to interject into conversation calls for a permanent commission in lunacy," said the man with the ingrowing grouch. "Now, the other day I was telling Jones going down on the subway that my four-year-old had swallowed a safety pin, and we were up half the night with him.

"'It was an accident, of course,' said that idiot Jones."

Bishop Eats His Own Boots.

Few bishops have to lead such a strenuous life as Bishop Stringer. In company with a missionary companion he made a tour recently to Herschel island, in the Arctic ocean, and back to Dawson City, where the bishop resides.

Their small supply of food becoming exhausted, they were obliged to eat their muckalucks and moccasins. These, made of raw sealskins, were soaked until they became glutinous, and were then toasted in strips over the fire. The bishop says the food was real good, especially the muckalucks.

Terrors of Frankness.

"There is no worse vice than frankness," said Booth Tarkington, at a farewell dinner in New York precedent to his departure for Europe. "How should I feel, for example, if I asked you for your opinion of my plays, and you answered me frankly, quite frankly?

"Why, I should feel like the poor lady at the bridge drive who said to her hostess' little daughter:

"'Your eyes are such a heavenly blue. And what color are my eyes, darling?'

"The child's high treble traveled easily to the further corner of the quiet room as she replied, looking earnestly up into her questioner's face:

"'Dwab middles, yellow whites and wed wims!'"

Simple Street Hat

IF YOU are looking for comfort and service in a street hat and want to be sure that it embodies style and becomingness as well, study the models shown here.

Fig. 1 shows a French hat woven in one piece and faced with a demi-facing of black velvet. It is so altogether charming that it will tempt the price of a much more elaborate effort from almost any discriminating buyer. Nothing could be simpler than its decoration of two pheasant feathers mounted with a big, jeweled straw, cabochon. This mounting of two long quills gives them an importance which places them in the "chanticler" class at once. And one must not complain at the high price of a "chanticler" pattern. This is really one of the most beautifully balanced shapes which is to be found. Call it the "hen-pheasant" model and cheerfully part with 200 francs for it in Paris. It will finally dawn upon those who observe that there are other things to a hat besides trimmings.

Fig. 2, of which two views are shown, is an American model in royal blue and white braid. The brim is soft and beautifully draped, and the whole make up of the hat shows the handiwork of an artist in millinery. Folded velvet is thrust through the brim at the left and extends across the back and disappears under the brim at the right side. Two blue wings spring out of the crown. A flower hatpin holds the turban in place, but is no part of the design. This is a very commendable design, and this is true of its modest price.

Nothing could be more unpretentious or more finished than a simple hat now much worn. This is of a durable braid in burnt straw color, faced with black satin ribbon. The ribbon, bordered with braid, is laid in a scant flat rosette and finished with four "ears." The crown is very large, but a model similarly trimmed, having a smaller crown, has been made and is even more successful than the original.

The American models are handmade of rows of braid sewed together. The braids are light in weight, very soft and of high luster. There is nothing rigid or heavy about the shapes, and they are altogether satisfactory.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

CONFIRMATION DRESS.

The dress we show here is pretty in its simplicity. It may be made up in white material. A plastron is taken down the center front, the bodice and skirt joining it with a wrapped seam; a strap of silk edges the foot of skirt, also the over-sleeves, and another is taken over the shoulders, while the lace yoke is edged by a small plastron of silk. The under-sleeves are of lace to match the yoke.

Materials required: Six yards 44 inches wide, one dozen buttons, two yards lace, two yards silk.

Pretty Veil Effect.

The nets dotted with metallic beads are used to a large extent for yokes, sleeves, sashes, etc. The general manipulation of yokes, cuffs, etc., is to use the net for the outer portion, lining with chiffon or mousseline de soie. The effect is better if the beaded set is used for a foundation and then veiled with finest mull, tulle or any delicate transparent fabric.

Puff skirts arranged with this kind of veiling give the prettiest effect imaginable, softening the glare of the metallic beads.

CONCEAL JOINING OF LACE

Easy to Arrange, Though Much Depends Upon the Quality of Material That Is Used.

It is possible to join lace so the joining is almost entirely concealed. This is managed in several ways, much depending upon the kind of lace and how it is used.

For a yoke or other solid surface that is to lie flat it is better to applique the lace together. Cut out the design irregularly and join it to the under piece so that it continues the pattern. The edges are buttonholed, sewed or overcast together according to which stitch shows least. Do this with fine thread and cut away all ragged edges.

For firmness it will usually be found necessary to join the under side also. In this case make the stitches on right side small.

Where lace is to be joined for a ruffle the best way to do it is to buttonhole the edges together in the tiniest possible seam. Use a fine thread and do the stitching neatly. This same method is often used on yokes and for thin laces is better, perhaps, than appliqueing. Press the edges open on right side between thumb and first finger so it does not pucker.

Some persons lap the edges of the lace so that the wrong side of the left side lies for about a quarter of an inch upon the right side of the under piece. Both ends are then hemmed in tiny stitches. This prevents a seam, but is almost impossible to do without showing.

Never join lace by sewing in a French seam, as it is entirely too bulky, and, no matter how carefully done, will not look neat. Above all, do not content yourself with sewing in a single seam. The edges curl badly at first washing and the lace is apt to pull apart.

For the Dressing Table.

A convenient set of three small consecutive bags, which will prove wonderfully convenient if hung beside the dressing table, is made from a yard length of pompadour, dresden or plain sash ribbon divided into three equal parts, folded into bag shape, the sides overcast missing beads by matching their color, if the selvage and the tops equipped with sets of rather long ribbon hangers, which join under a big rosette or a silk-covered cabochon. The same design may be used for a desk accessory for preserving special scraps of paper, by making the triplet bags of chamois, bordered with ribbon and decorated with the embroidered initials of the owner, each bag compartment bearing a different letter.

Sinnycuss—Didn't you ever put the wrong end of a cigar in your mouth?

AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald.

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain—would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. A neighbor said it must be salt rheum. Having used Cuticura Soap merely as a toilet soap before, I now decided to order a set of the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them according to directions for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated, but toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. On my scalp I used about one half a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment in all. The first time I took six or seven bottles of Cuticura Pills and the last time three bottles—neither an expensive or tedious treatment. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind. Standing up, with my hair unbound, it comes to my knees and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald.

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience may help someone else. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Me., Oct. 29, 1909."

"D-e-f-e-n-d-a-m," spelled the youngster on the rear seat as the "rubberneck" wagon was passing the Twenty-second Regiment armory, at Broadway and Sixty-eighth street. "What does that mean, auntie?"

"I didn't quite catch what the guide said," replied the old lady. "Oh, Mr. Guide, won't you kindly tell us what it says on that building?"

"Def-en-dum!" roared the guide through his megaphone, dividing the word into three sections.

"That's what it is," said the old lady. "A deaf and dumb asylum."

Woman Caught Red Handed.

A woman was caught red handed last Tuesday. There was nothing sensational about it. All she had done was to do her washing with cheap, common yellow laundry soap, and the result was, as it always is, that her hands were cracked and chapped and chafed until they were sights. Easy Task soap relieves a woman of so much rubbing and dipping the hands in the water that no harm results. As a matter of fact, Easy Task soap is good to wash the hands with. It won't hurt the most delicate skin any more than the finest lace.

TIME FOR HIS DEPARTURE

As Close Friend Knew, That Frame of Mind Was Not Apt to Be a Lasting One.

Ben. T. Rice and Hymen Levy, both now dead, were two of the real old Virginia characters in a small Piedmont county seat town; Ben was the keeper of the town inn and Hymen, a genuine Jew, ran a store. Ben was noted for profanity, drinking and gambling and telling unheard-of yarns. Hymen was a daily visitor at the inn to get his dram, and at times became thoroughly shocked at Ben's outrageous language and manners. Ben, one evening, joined the town boys in an exciting game of football on Main street, became overheated, and, cooling off too quickly, went into pneumonia at night. Several physicians attended him, who soon pronounced his case hopeless. A dozen or more of Ben's friends, among them Hymen, were standing around the bed just before Ben's spirit took its flight from earth, when Ben uttered a long groan and said: "Oh, L-o-r-d, have mercy on me." At this moment Hymen turned his head slowly and remarked: "The good Lord ought to take Ben right now, for he never will be so good no more."

When Her Back Aches.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Emporium women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in an Emporium woman's words:

Mrs. A. Extrom, Sixth Street, Emporium, Pa., says: "I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for they did me a world of good. I suffered intensely from backache and pains through my kidneys and I was restless at night. Headaches and dizzy spells annoyed me and my feet often became swollen. Nothing gave me relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Taggart's drug store. They proved to be just the remedy I needed and the contents of three or four boxes restored me to good health."

Halley's Comet has been visible but little here on account of cloudy and hazy weather, and if it is guilty of causing the cold bad weather, which has killed all the fruit and most of the young garden truck, we can afford to bid it good bye for another 75 year trip through space. There was but little fruit here last year, and none this year, and this bieng the general bearing year for orchards, here, we are about sure of a three years' fruit famine.

There was to have been a base ball game here on Sunday between Wharton and First Fork, but the Whartons didn't put in an appearance so the game was "called out."

It is reported that there are lots of large trout coming up the stream this spring, but since the pulp mill at Austin is again turning it foul stuff into the stream, they are no good for food, when caught. It seems as though the authorities of the great State of Pennsylvania should be able to put a stop to the pollution of the streams, and do something to preserve the fish, instead of wasting so much time and money in hatching and stocking the streams, for the manufacturers to kill. But this is another case $ $ control the situation, thus keeping up the reputation of this State for "Graft and Boodle."

Fine growing weather here now and the farmers are through with their planting and seeding. More acreage of potatoes planted than last year.
